LIST OF LETTERS.

ADVERTISED IN THE TRIBUNE BY SPECIAL APPOINTMENT.

"I am a stranger now on Tompkins' lot. What a place it has become a set! But it's luck to me—in a month or so I shall foreclose, and the camp must go. Sounds! I won't have his wife have a 'takin' on.' When she learns her house and lots are gone? How she will blubber and sob and sigh. But business is business, and what care I?"

Gibson has murdered his cat, they say. He was drunk when he did it, they say. And his wife is a brat as I went to fill. His is not the brat who would have his will. And the folks blame me, why they blame their pizzards! If I didn't sell, he would go to Izard's! I've a right to engage in a lawful trade. And take my chance if there's cash to be made."

AN Inland Town in Alabama—Progress of Business and Population.

Correspondence of The Tribune.

EUFALIA, Barbour Co., Ala. Jan 21st, 1846.

Perhaps I am presuming too much in addressing you from so small a place as "Eufaulia," containing only 2500 inhabitants; but it is not always the largest place that contains the most news. I trust the exception will prove true in this case. This village is situated on the West side of the Chatahoochee river, on a high bluff which makes it more favorable for health. There are three churches, three houses and twenty-five stores in the place; consequently the religious part of the community cannot complain for want of places of worship, the epicureans gratify their appetites, or the people at large for want of opportunity to possess themselves of the necessaries and luxuries of life.

A considerable amount of business is done here in the buying and shipment of Cotton. Upwards of 15,000 bales are annually shipped to Apalachicola, Florida, by steamboats which ply upon Colquitt's Ga. to the former place, and thence in fine navigable rivers, to New Orleans, where steamboats are employed, and are doing a fair amount of business.

Game, such as deer, wild turkey and rabbits, duck and partridges, are found in this vicinity in great abundance. The winter there is but little snow, however, in fact, most of the time they have experienced no weather in this region for eight years past. The most beautiful part of the season in this country is the Spring. In February the genial rays of the sun dispel the winter gloom and make the wild flowers to blossom, filling the atmosphere with their fragrance, the trees decked in their beautiful foliage, and the birds warbling their sweet notes, present a delightful contrast to the dreariness of Winter.

A few years since, eight years ago—and this country was then inhabited by Creek Indians—a perfect wilderness. But the poor Indian was forced from his kindred home, to migrate among new scenes in a far-off country. West of the Mississippi, while the white man, who had driven him from his native haunts, had made "the wilderness to blossom with the flower of文明." The residents of Eufaulia are generally emigrants from the North, South Carolina and Virginia, while many are natives of New England—or happy New England—whose influence over-spreads the broad land beyond, as wide as the ocean of rum, beer and brandy, which is the chief product of this state. A true New-Englander, who loves his home, will never forget his native home, where he drew his first breath and received his first impressions. The helly breezes of the South and the influences of its mild climate, do not enough to transplant the affections. So long as a New-Englander remains here, he is still a New-Englander—so long as the veins of his early youth are remembered and practiced, so long will New-England be endeared to him.

Perhaps at a future time I will give you the influences which are at work to corrupt and vitiate the morals of young men in the South, and the bad mode of conducting them.

Yours truly, E. D. E.
